12th International Symposium of Oenology of Bordeaux (OEno 2023)

9th International Conference on Macromolecules and Secondary

Metabolites of Vine and Wine (Macrowine 2023)

From July 10 to July 13 2023

The oenology research unit, ISVV, University of Bordeaux, is jointly organizing the 12th oenology symposium, OEno 2023, and the 9th edition of the international conference on macromolecules and secondary metabolites of the vine and wine, Macrowine 2023. This event OenoMacrowine 2023, which will celebrate the 60th anniversary of the Bordeaux oenology congresses, aims to identify prospects for research, development and innovation that could be useful to the wine industry. With the hosting of Macrowine, a particular focus will be given to polyphenols and compounds of sensory impact. In addition, in view of the many challenges facing the wine industry, both on the subjects of agro-ecological transition, consumer expectations and societal demands, we plan to invite papers that address these issues, through the various traditional themes of the International Congress of Oenology::

- Plant and environment, grape quality
- Microorganisms in grapes and wine: diversity and adaptation
- Wine chemistry, wine components with physiological effects
- Oenological practices and processes
- Sensory properties: psychophysics - cognitive psychology, experimental economics, links with neuroscience.
